

Dr. Ed Hoffman

As Director of the NASA Academy of Program/Project and Engineering Leadership (APPEL), Dr. Hoffman is responsible for the development of program/project and engineering leaders and teams within NASA. This includes the development and maintenance of a comprehensive program/project management and engineering competency model, training curriculum, consulting services for project management teams, and knowledge sharing strategies. In this capacity, Dr. Hoffman works within NASA, as well as externally with leaders of industry, academia, associations, and other government agencies in order to establish priorities and enhance capabilities in program and project management.

Dr. Hoffman is a visiting professor at the University of Technology at Sydney, and serves as adjunct faculty at Webster University.

He is a frequently invited speaker at conferences and associations, has authored numerous articles, and has co-authored the books entitled, "Project Management Success Stories: Lessons of Project Leaders" published in 2000 by Wiley and "Shared Voyage" published in 2005 by National Aeronautics and Space Administration, NASA History Division.

Dr. Hoffman holds a Doctorate, as well as a Master of Arts and a Master of Science degree from Columbia University in the area of social and organizational psychology. He received a Bachelor of Science in Psychology from Brooklyn College in 1981. He resides in Maryland with his wife Dianne and two children, Amanda and Daniel.